Media Summary

Bananas are the number one selling line in Australian supermarkets and as such are used by major retailers to both drive foot traffic through their stores but also to drive the overall profitability of their fresh produce departments. At the current time there is no clear correlation between wholesale banana prices and supermarket retail prices leaving producers with no clear market signals.

This creates uncertainty at the producer level about the true state of consumer demand which may also result in supply fluctuations which are greater and more frequent than might be the case where clear market signals are available.

This project was implemented to collect and report on banana retail prices in order to create the required link between wholesale banana prices and supermarket retail prices.

During the life of this project (41 months) banana retail price and display information has been collected and reported on a weekly basis. The information is collected every Monday by surveyors in Brisbane, Sydney, Melbourne and Perth from a range of stores including the major supermarkets, independent supermarkets and independent grocers.

The information collected includes assessment date, store name and location, variety, pack type, size/weight of fruit, display type, price, in store location, whether the fruit is on special and country of origin. The aggregated results by capital city are reported in a graphical format on a weekly basis on the ABGC website: (<http://www.abgc.org.au/?industry/consignments/market>).

These reports are available to all members of industry with access to the ABGC website.

1.0 Technical Summary

The lack of clear market signals makes it difficult for banana producers to discern the true state of consumer demand thus hindering their ability to make business decisions about the amount of product to send to which market and to make an objective assessment about the returns they should expect for their product. It is generally understood that the lack of clear market signals provides supermarkets with an advantage in the market place which producers (and consumers) claim is open to abuse.

This project aimed to address this issue through the collection and reporting of banana prices at a retail level on the weekly basis. These prices were collected from the four largest markets in Australia; Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane and Perth. This information assists in the identification of disproportionate profit taking at the retail level and evens up the balance of market power between consumers, retailers and producers.

The results from this project lay a very strong foundation upon which to build an industry leading supply chain information network. It is important that this information is coupled with other information collected by the ABGC including wholesale market prices and transport figures. It is also important for the industry to continue the collection of this information in order to continue the tracking of retail prices to aid in increasing clarity around market signals.

2.0 Introduction

The lack of clear market signals makes it difficult for banana producers to discern the true state of consumer demand thus hindering their ability to make business decisions about the amount of product to send to which market and to make an objective assessment about the returns they should expect for their product. It is generally understood that the lack of clear market signals provides supermarkets with an advantage in the market place which producers (and consumers) claim is open to abuse.

By conducting weekly price monitoring across all major markets an indicative prevailing retail price across each market can be determined and made available to producers. This information assists in the identification of disproportionate profit taking at the retail level and evens up the balance of market power between consumers, retailers and producers.

Improving access to information along the supply chain was identified as a priority in the industry's new strategic plan (see strategies 1.2 and 3.2). The results from this project lay a very strong foundation upon which to build an industry leading supply chain information network.

3.0 Materials and Methods

Avocados Australia operates a project (AV07023) to collect avocado retail prices from 16 stores across four major Australian capital cities (Sydney, Brisbane, Melbourne and Perth) on a weekly basis. The same methodology is being applied to the banana retail price surveys project as is applied in AV07023.

In each city, fruit is sampled from the retail sectors as shown in Table 1. Bananas have been sampled from a total of 64 shops – 4 cities x 16 stores per city. The localities and specific stores have been determined based on ABS statistics to ensure a spread across suburbs with varied socioeconomic profiles.

Table 1: Sampling Plan - Retailers

Retail sector/ business	Number of shops per city
Woolworths	3
Coles	3
IGA/ Foodland/ Foodworks	3
Independent chains (eg Harris Farms)	3
Large volume/ price sensitive retailer	2
High quality retailer	2

Surveys were conducted in each city on a weekly basis via a hand held data collection device. Initially the company Food Circus was contracted to conduct the surveys, however in April 2010 Avocados Australia took over direct contracts with the four assessors and their backup personnel. The range of information collected is listed below.

Information collected	Options
Assessment Date	Date price data collected
Store	eg. Coles, Woolworths, IGA, Independent stores by name
Store Location	Suburb
Store State	QLD/NSW/VIC/WA
Product Type	Banana
Product	Cavendish/Lady Finger
Display Number	Dependent on number of displays in store
Pack Type	Loose/Prepack
Average/Total Weight	In grams
Store Display	Single layer/Stacked
Unit Price	per unit
Unit	Per unit/Per kg
In Store Location	Location of display in store
On Special	No/Catalogue/Store
Country of Origin	Australia/Mixed/Not Specified/"listed country of origin"
Comments	Comments relevant to particular display eg. Promotions/quality/branding

The results have been automatically relayed back to the Australian Banana Growers' Council to allow timely reporting in line with other reports currently published.

The price reports have been updated and reported weekly on the Australian Banana Growers Council website so that they can be viewed in conjunction with other information collected by the ABGC including wholesale market prices and transport figures.

Furthermore, following Cyclone Yasi in early 2011 and the devastation that event rendered upon the Australian banana industry, Avocados Australia received a request from the Reserve Bank of Australia to have access to the weekly pricing information. The purpose of the request was to enable the Reserve Bank of Australia to monitor and track the increase in prices in the market place as bananas are a key grocery item for Australian consumers. Following this request weekly pricing information was provided to the Reserve Bank of Australia from March 2011 onwards.

5.0 Discussion

The scope of this project was to collect and report weekly retail price data to the Australian Banana Growers Council. The data was therefore collected and provided in a format that could be easily reported through the ABGC website and other communication used by the ABGC.

The data is housed in an online database which can be interrogated to pull out specific subsets of data from specific time frames and regions.

6.0 Technology transfer

The retail price information has been communicated to industry via the ABGC website.

7.0 Recommendations

The following recommendations are made in relation to finding of this research project:

- It is recommended that ABGC continue the collection of retail prices via this mechanism and that they are reported in conjunction with wholesale price data any fruit volume data available.
- Timely analysis should also accompany these reports.

8.0 Acknowledgements

Avocados Australia would like to acknowledge the input from Food Circus and the individual staff who conduct the weekly retail price surveys.
